Solid Corbels (Raftertails)

Before the development of pre manufactured wood trusses, the roofs of most residential and commercial structures were supported by large beams. These beams extended through to the outside of the building. The ends of these beams were often distinctively shaped and come to be known as “Raftertails”. Solid Corbels were also widely used as support for the eaves and decoration. Today, construction techniques have changed but the desire for those “retro” appearances created by yesterdays craftsman remains. DWL Millworks manufactures and installs all of the most popular Raftertail and Solid Corbel styles. We are always in touch with the market and can suggest many current styles as well as customize to your exacting standards. If your design is proprietary, DWL catalogs your design template and will not provide it to others.

Brackets (Kneebraces)

Brackets are a popular feature for adding both stability and support as well as decoration. They are sometimes referred to as “kneebraces” Today buildings are colorful, finished products, consisting of complex paint themes. Some buildings are finished to display a more Rustic look. Because of this, DWL Brackets are provided in both smooth or rough sawn timber material to help meet your exact requirements. We can supply brackets of all sizes to your site ready to install. Or, DWL provides milling, coloring and installation service packages for general contractors and developers and exterior contractors. (See Vendor Programs on the back panel.) Individual or institution, DWL supplies what you want, quality products and service at an affordable price.
